Tangent Books, United Kingdom, 2007. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Richard Jones (illustrator). 148 x 105 mm. Language: N/A. Brand New Book. Bill Shankly, as he so often did, found the right words. It was the evening of May 25, 1967, and Celtic had just won the European Cup, beating the much-vaunted Internazionale in the Final in Lisbon. Not just beaten them, but swept them off the park with a scintillating display of attacking football which set the Italians stultifyingly negative tactics at naught. It was a huge victory for Celtic, for Glasgow and for Scotland. It was a huge victory for football. Shankly, who had travelled to the match as an ordinary supporter, talked his way into the Celtic dressing room after the match, and embraced his friend and countryman. John, he announced. You re immortal now. And so he was. Stein had taken over this team just two years earlier, and in their first season of European Cup football he had taken them to the pinnacle. He did it by melding a disparate collection of Glaswegian talent (10 of the Lisbon Lions were born and bred in the streets around Parkhead - Bobby Lennox was the sole foreigner hailing from Saltcoats in Ayrshire, 39 miles distant) into an exciting side which laid waste to the best that Scotland, and then Europe, could throw at them. The high watermark of his achievement, of course, was 1967. Surely there will be another feat like it in the history of football. In that glorious campaign The Hoops pulled off a perfect quadrilateral of Scottish League Cup, Scottish FA Cup, Scottish Championship and the best of the lot - the European Champions Cup. That s not to say that Stein s work at Celtic was finished. In the following seasons he cemented the...
