In 1831, the population of the United Kingdom had increased to 24,000,000. The consumption of intoxicating liquor was as follows: --The annual average of ardent spirits for the six years ending 1831, was 25,652,428 gals, (old wine measure), of wine, about 7,500,000 gals, (old wine measure). The number of gallons of strong malt liquors brewed by publicans and brewers during the eight years preceding 1830, was in England alone, about 230,000,000, (of this quantity only 20,000,000 were exported.) But throwing it in as the amount consumed in Ireland and Scotland, what have we? Why,...
